Toward Positive Thinking

Positive thoughts are upbeat and hopeful. They can increase feelings of happiness and cheerfulness, like:
• “I’ll get through this. I’ve been through hard times before.”
• “It will sure be interesting - Something new for me.”
• “I just have to be myself and do my best. It will be fine.”

Neutral thoughts are better than negative ones, like:
• “I’ll be glad when it’s over. It will be easier next time.”
• “It went better than it could have - At least I learned something.”

Negative thoughts are gloomy, depressing thoughts. They can make people feel sad and hopeless.
• By making anxiety worse, they can lead to panic attacks.
• By expecting bad things to happen, things are more likely to go wrong.

People can change a negative, pessimistic, downbeat view from “the glass half empty” to an optimistic, hopeful view of “the glass half full.”
• Even though you will still have problems, a healthier attitude makes it easier to solve those problems.

How can you make your thinking more positive?
• Use “thought stopping” for repetitive thinking
• Work on problem solving
• Change distorted or irrational thinking
• Use coping statements

Repetitive thinking is an unhealthy cycle of anxiety, or self-blame while thinking, dwelling, repeating, ruminating, worrying, “stewing,” or dreading.
• It does no good to think about the same thing over and over when there is nothing that can be done about it.
• Ask yourself a simple question, “Is there anything I can do to fix it or make it better?”
• If the answer is yes, then do what needs to be done.
Toward Positive Thinking

• If it can’t be done right away, write it down on a piece of paper, or on a “To Do” list, to be sure to remember.

What if you can’t do anything to make things better?
• Sometimes you can’t make things better, no matter how long you lay awake thinking about it. “Let it go,” at least until morning.
• If you have no control of the problem, or if there is nothing you can do, try a “thought stopping technique”.
• Tell the negative thoughts to stop coming into your head.
• “Push them out” when the negative, repeating, or racing thoughts come back.
• Replace them with realistic, healthier thoughts, and positive thinking.

You Can Stop Negative Thinking
• Remind yourself, “Negative thoughts are not healthy or helpful. I need to try to be more positive.”
• Replace negative thoughts with positive thoughts – Try focusing on some pleasant memories of your favorite place.
• Remember the sights, smells, sounds, sensations and emotions when you were in that place.
• Or, you could pray or meditate.
• By stopping negative thinking, people can decrease depression and anxiety.

Changing Automatic Negative Thoughts
• Changing your thinking habits takes a willing decision.
• Think of pathways in your brain as “roads”.
• Automatic negative thoughts speed down “highways” that lead to more and more negative thinking, anxiety, and depressed mood.
• Create new pathways by slowly changing negative thoughts into more positive ones.
• Chemicals in the brain can actually be changed by new thinking habits, like using neutral or positive thinking.

Is Thought Stopping Effective?
Toward Positive Thinking

- Some research says it can be helpful, but some studies say it doesn’t help because unwanted thoughts come back if the problem isn’t solved.
- Don’t use thought stopping for long-term problems or for suicidal thoughts. You need professional help right away if you are in a crisis.
- Your efforts to stop negative thinking may not always be enough, but they can be helpful until you get more help to solve your problem.

Replace Faulty (Irrational) Thoughts

- If you see negative, irrational, faulty, or “stinking thinking,” you have a chance to change it.
- Talk to your doctor about cognitive behavioral therapy (CBT), an effective treatment for many mental illnesses.
  - Helps change your thoughts, beliefs, and attitudes, to more rational and realistic ones
  - Helps you help yourself face challenges calmly
  - Focuses efforts on goals and actions that are likely to have good results

Use Coping Statements

- “I wish I had done things better, but I’m not perfect.”
- “I can’t expect to never make mistakes. In fact, no one else is perfect, either.”
- “It’s going to be alright. It is natural to be nervous sometimes.”
- “I am going to stay calm and think more positively.”

Be ready to replace your negative thoughts with healthier, more positive thinking. It may seem hard at first, but it will become easier with practice.
